LEELANAW AFFAIR NOT SO VERY SERIOUS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, July 27.—Germany's apparent determination to sink American ships with the promise to pay reparations under the policy it established in the Frye case, may require another warning to be sent to Berlin.

This was the view in administration quarters today following the sinking of the American ship Leelanaw. It was generally believed, however, that this incident could not change the general situation between the U. S. and Germany and would serve merely to increase the tension in the relations between the two governments.

That the sinking of the Leelanaw does not bring the gravest crisis between the U. S. and Germany is due to several mitigating circumstances—the fact that her crew was warned and escaped; the apparently considerate treatment of the crew by the German commander, who took the ship aboard the submarine, according to official dispatches, and the further fact that the Leelanaw carried no cargo, which was declared contraband of war by Germany last April.

Nevertheless, this government disputes Germany's right to destroy ships even if they carry contraband. This was the contention in the Frye case, the U. S. falling back on the old treaty of 1858 between Prussia and this government. Germany apparently is insisting upon her own interpretation of that treaty under the exigencies of the occasion and is expected to make reparations for the Leelanaw.

While it is not felt that the Leelanaw incident will be sufficient to strain to the breaking point the relations between the two governments, it has by no means improved the situation. Officials were surprised and grieved over the sinking of the vessel, while the mere confirmation of her cargo would have caused only passing comment. It is probable that the Leelanaw affair will be handled as a separate matter by this government, but it has at least an indirect bearing on the broader controversy over Germany's submarine warfare.

The British shipping controversy again loomed large today on the horizon of international negotiations. The note received by the state department yesterday from the London government regarding its blockade, is declared to be by no means satisfactory. Great Britain is understood to defend her attempt to stop all trade with Germany and to state that the prize court is the proper place of redress for American shippers who feel aggrieved.

It is planned that the British note shall be made public in this country and Great Britain tomorrow morning. President Wilson is considering its text at Cornish today.

There is no lack of understanding in official circles of the seriousness of the controversy with Great Britain. The protests of American shippers are becoming more numerous and vehement and this disagreement with England would have come to the fore long ago had it not been for the more absorbing controversy with Germany over the safety of human life rather than cargoes.

The British note is said to offer little prospect of an immediate adjustment of the differences between the U. S. and England over the latter's order in council and the hardships it is imposing on American shipping.

Great Britain, it is said, insists that her acts are consistent with the principles of international law; that these principles merely have been applied in a new way to suit changed conditions on the seas and the geographical position of Germany and that a precedent for the acts committed under the British order in council is found in this country—the blockade of the Civil War.

The stand of the U. S. government in its Civil War, Great Britain says, is inconsistent with the protest it now makes against the British blockade.

The note is further understood to say that American citizens who feel they have been deprived of their rights because of Britain's interference with trade on the seas, have recourse to the prize courts. If the prize court rulings prove unsatisfactory, it is urged, these aggrieved shippers may go to the British privy council and may finally enlist the diplomatic support of the United States government in the arbitration of the claims.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing will give the deepest study to the British blockade situation and a strong note is expected to go forward to Great Britain soon after the President's return to Washington.

BECKER WINS A BRIEF DELAY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 27.—Though the execution of Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal has been postponed until Friday morning to give Supreme Court Justice Ford time to consider the application for a new trial made by attorneys for the condemned man, it is possible that Justice Ford will hand down his decision before night.

The justice took under consideration today affidavits presented by Becker's counsel and also arranged to confer with the opposing lawyers. It was understood that if he found the affidavits too weak to demand the calling of witnesses, he would so inform the lawyers and notify them of his decision immediately. It lay within his power, however, to call witnesses, including Becker himself.

Mrs. Becker returned early today from Sing Sing where she went last night to inform her husband of the steps that had been taken in his behalf. She appeared more hopeful than at any previous time.

CHIEF CHIPP VISITS POUGHKEEPSIE FIRE

Fire Chief Rodney A. Chipp and Commissioner Charles Lahl visited Poughkeepsie Monday in order to see the ruins of the $200,000 fire which occurred there Sunday night.

At five o'clock Monday afternoon, when they left Poughkeepsie, the fire was still burning and the Poughkeepsie firemen had eight streams playing on the burned buildings. The fire had almost burned itself out at the plants of Armour & Company and the Nelson Morris Company, and had been practically extinguished at the W. D. Wilbur Lumber Company's plant, but was still burning fiercely in the ruins of the storage warehouse of Forsyth & Davis of this city.

The entire fire department of the city was called out to fight the flames and when the fire was at its height the firemen had fifteen streams at work.

The Poughkeepsie water supply is taken from the Hudson river and is pumped to a storage reservoir above the city, but the pressure on the high points is not great. The fire department therefore uses a pumping engine connected with its automobile truck, similar to the apparatus recently purchased by the Kingston fire commissioners, and also a steamer.

Dog Milks Her Cow.

This morning a woman from North Rondout appeared before the recorder seeking redress from a neighbor's dog who she said milked her cow while it was out to pasture. From her story it seems that she puts her cow out to pasture each day and milks when she brought the animal to the barn to milk it she found that the cow did not give its usual quantity of milk. She later discovered that the neighbor's dog was in the habit of going into the field and making friends with the cow and would suck her udder dry. She was informed that the best thing she could do was to warn the neighbor to keep the dog at home and if the dog continued to enjoy its dinner at her expense she could have the animal shot as a nuisance.

They Drank Pure Alcohol.

Monday afternoon Jacob Freeman and Thomas Slattery, two umbrellas menders, secured a quart bottle of pure alcohol and proceeded to drink the contents of the bottle. So powerful was the effect of the alcohol that both men proceeded to enjoy themselves by ringing door bells on Henry street and generally making a nuisance of themselves. Word was telephoned to police headquarters and Policeman Ryan hurried to the scene and placed them under arrest. This morning each umbrella mender was given five days in the county jail to recover from the effects of the alcohol.

Song Feast at South Rondout.

Under the direction of the Rev. R. P. Ingersoll and family of Rhinebeck the Christian Endeavor Society of the South Rondout M. E. Church will hold a song feast or festival at the church, Friday evening, July 30, at 7:45. Mr. Ingersoll will be present at the prayer service Thursday evening, after which a full rehearsal will be held. To participate one does not need to be a member of the C. E. Society, only qualification necessary, a willingness to sing. A small admission will be charged. After the singing ice cream will be on sale.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Assemblyman Henry R. DeWitt, as referee in the mortgage foreclosure action brought by Wallace Crosby against Fletcher H. McLennan and others, sold at auction at the court house today the McLennan cottage and one-quarter of an acre of ground situated at Pine Hill. The property was bid in by the plaintiff for $150. John W. Eckert appeared for the plaintiff.

DERWACK NEITHER CRAZY NOR LAZY

He is a Sick Man and Therefore is Not to be Sent to Middletown Nor to Jail.

Peter DerWack is neither crazy nor lazy, according to the physicians appointed by Judge Jenkins to make an examination in regard to his sanity, and on Monday afternoon the judge sustained the writ of habeas corpus which was sued out on Saturday by County Attorney John W. Eckert on behalf of Mrs. DerWack, on whose petition he had been previously committed to the State Hospital at Middletown, and both the husband and wife returned home together.

The physicians found that DerWack's condition is such that it will be impossible for him ever to do another day's hard work.

The examination was made by Drs. Elbert D. B. Loughran and A. A. Stern and occupied more than an hour. The examination was thorough physically and mentally, and the doctors immediately communicated the result of their work to Judge Jenkins. The situation was explained to Mrs. DerWack and her daughters, and to Mrs. MacMillan, of the Women's Federation, who has taken an active interest in the matter.

When the hearing was resumed before Judge Jenkins, Dr. Stern stated the result of the examination conducted by himself and Dr. Loughran. They found there was no response to some of the reflexes and that DerWack's physical condition was such that he never would be able to do another day's hard work. This was the result of a neurotic condition which disclosed incipient paresis. The condition might be progressive or DerWack might remain in the same condition for some time. There was no reason for his commitment to the Middletown State Hospital, in their opinion.

On Dr. Stern's statement, in which Dr. Loughran concurred, Mr. Eckert moved to sustain the writ of habeas corpus and to discharge DerWack. Assistant District Attorney Traver consented to this disposition of the case and DerWack was discharged by Judge Jenkins.

This is the first case in Ulster county in which an independent examination of a patient has been ordered by the court. It is also the first time in which a petitioner for a person's commitment to the Middletown State Hospital has afterward used every effort to secure such person's release.

In the present case, Mrs. DerWack failed to understand why her husband did not work. He talked of his desire to work at times but refused to go to work and made no explanation of such refusal. A year ago she procured his arrest on a charge of non-support. He was discharged on his promise to find employment and to go to work. Last week he was again arrested on his wife's complaint, and while the proceeding was pending she secured his examination to determine his sanity. The examination was made by Dr. Harry W. A. Haase and Dr. Desmond, who signed a certificate of his insanity. She also had him examined by Dr. Walter D. Hasbrouck and Dr. Frederick Huhne, who told her that he was not insane but was lazy.

The DerWacks have ten children, the oldest of whom is twenty years and the youngest ten weeks. He came to America from Austrian Poland twenty-six years ago and is now forty-six years old.

Koslowski Boy Discharged.

This morning Brony Koslowski, the fifteen year old boy of Murray street, arrested on the charge of forging the endorsement of U. S. Grant on the back of a check drawn by F. E. Wieber, the downtown plumber, was discharged when arraigned before Recorder Andrew Lang as Mr. Wieber did not appear to press the charge. Brony was arrested a short time ago for the crime and was paroled until the next morning when he skipped town. Monday he gave himself up when he appeared at the hall in company with his lawyer and was placed under $1,000 bonds and the case was held open until today. This morning when the case was called for trial the endorsement of U. S. Grant on the back of the check and Brony was charged with forging the endorsement. On the motion of Mr. Brinnier the complaint was dismissed when the complainant failed to appear and the bail bond was cancelled.

AUSTRIANS RAID COAST OF ITALY

Rome, July 27.—Austrian warships and hydroplanes made a combined attack on the Italian coast in the Ancona region from sea and air today. The naval squadron, consisting of a cruiser and four torpedo boats is believed to have come in from the Austrian naval base at Pola, ninety miles north of Ancona.

Appearing off the coast shortly after dawn, the cruiser opened fire from a position three miles off the coast upon the railroad line between Fano and Senigallia. The torpedo boats served as guards to prevent an attack by an Italian submarine.

While the railroad was being bombed several Austrian hydroplanes flew southward to Ancona. Rising above that city the aviators dropped a number of bombs.

The official announcement of the Austrian raid said that only slight damage was done.

Fight at Cementon.

Smith was removed to his home in the physician's automobile.

EXCURSION BOATS IN A COLLISION

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Louisville, Ky., July 27.—It appeared likely today that a federal investigation would be ordered into the collision late last night near Vevay, Ind., between the Ohio river steamer City of Louisville and the Homer Smith, a five deck excursion steamer. These boats left Cincinnati for Louisville about the same hour and on the way down engaged in a race. Just below Vevay, the City of Louisville overhauled the Homer Smith, but ran in so close to the latter that the two boats came together, causing a general shaking up. Soon after they separated, the City of Louisville crashed into the stern of the Homer Smith, damaging her big paddle. The hundreds of passengers on both boats were badly frightened but nobody was injured.

Mr. Loughran has held the office of clerk of the board of supervisors for a number of years and has given great satisfaction in that capacity.

BOY DROWNED AT ROCK LOCK

Douglas Whitney, 16 years old, son of William Whitney, was drowned in the Rondout creek near lower Rock Lock Sunday evening.

Young Whitney with several other youths prepared to take a swim in the creek. The water at that point is twenty feet deep and the current is swift. After the others had gone in the water Whitney made a dive in the deep water. He failed to come to the surface and the others tried to reach him. They could not locate his body and at once gave an alarm which resulted in the search being taken up by a number of men. The search was continued Monday and today, but the body had not been recovered up to this afternoon.

Whitney was employed by Lawyer John E. Hardenbergh and his father works the farm owned by Mr. Hardenbergh on the Rosendale-Kingston road near the Old Orchard Farm. He was a young man of exemplary habits and was very popular with the young people of the neighborhood as well as the young people who are spending the summer in cottages in that vicinity.

CITY IN HANDS OF A RECEIVER

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Nashville, Tenn., July 27.—The city of Nashville was today placed in the hands of a receiver by Chancellor Allison, as the climax of a long tangle over municipal affairs. Howse, Commissioners Elliott and Andrews and Treasurer Meyers, the court taking this action under an ouster bill filed some time ago.

Up until the seventh inning the game was a pitchers' battle between Dolfinger of the Hoods and Clark of the Monograms when Clark weakened and the Hoods scored 4 runs in the eighth frame. The batteries for Robin Hoods were Dolfinger and Campbell; for Monograms, Clark and Robins.

Automobile Collision.

This morning about 7 o'clock a taxicab from Bushnell's garage on Ferry street and an automobile truck owned and driven by Fred Snyder, came together head on on Broadway near the central post office with a crash that could be heard a block away. The taxicab, which was driven by Ray Sabloff, had as a passenger Bernard Fors of Abel street, who was being conveyed to the West Shore station, where he expected to catch the train for New York city. Mr. Fors escaped with a deep cut over his eye, while Mr. Sabloff, who drove, was uninjured. Both machines were badly wrecked by the collision. The taxi's entire front was crushed in and both headlights smashed while the delivery truck's front end was also smashed in on one side. Both machines were taken to Millard's garage for repairs. As the men started to shove the taxi over to the garage it ran away down Grand street, but one of the men managed to hang on to the running board of the machine and shut off the power, stopping the car after it had run nearly to the Ulster and Delaware railroad crossing. The blame for the accident will be fixed later.

BECKER CASE NOT YET DECIDED

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 27.—Briefs in support of a new trial for Charles Becker, now under sentence of death in Sing Sing, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, were submitted to Justice Ford today by Bourke Cockran. Justice Ford announced that the evidence and documents which he must study are so voluminous that he might not reach a decision until some time tonight.

The justice spent the greater part of last night studying the record of the second Becker trial and comparing it with the affidavits submitted by Becker's counsel yesterday. In the meantime the execution of Becker has been postponed from tomorrow morning until Friday morning at the request of Justice Ford.

GREAT BALL GAME NEXT SATURDAY

On Saturday of this week, the last day of July, there will be an unusually fine game of baseball played at Cuneo's athletic field. The Red Monograms of this city will struggle for supremacy with the crack team from Tivoli. The tickets will be 25 cents and the proceeds will go to the general fund of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

The splendid work done by this organization well reserves the support of every Kingston citizen. The relief work accomplished by the Federation last winter is known to all, but it is perhaps not generally understood that the social service work among the Kingston poor goes on throughout the year.

The salaried representative of the Federation works in co-operation with public officials to relieve widows and children, attend to cases of non-support, furnish a nurse when such service is needed and secure work for the unemployed.

Such work as this requires money, and the baseball game on Saturday is to swell this fund.

The Red Monogram team has volunteered its services, the Herbert Carl Dry Goods Company has printed the tickets and Mr. Cuneo has donated the field. Let the public do its part. Buy the tickets.

INGRATITUDE

It isn't the words we express, but the deeds we do that measure the degree of our gratitude. The earth and all things in Nature receive and give back that which they have to give. The law is invariably save in the one instance of man, or rather with most men: Shower upon the majority of men your favors and helpfulness and they return for more, forgetting what was done for them before.

We concede to most of the faults of our fellowmen, excluding the one of ingratitude. We are truly grateful for the good-will and patronage of our friends, and the only way we see how to prove our gratitude is to continue to brew our splendid

MORE PAGEANT AT ROXBURY

Pageants, out of door presentations of local history are now very popular all over the country, wherever a place has such geographical conditions as to make such a performance possible. Their charm and attractiveness is testified to by those who have been so fortunate as to attend any of these events. Roxbury is now to have such a pageant on Friday, September third. For many years the More Reunions have been notable annual occurrences at Roxbury and this year the reunion will take the form of the "More-Roxbury Pageant," wherein there will be some 200 performers, six bagpipers and Muller's band from this city all participating. There will be six "Episodes" and three "Interludes" about as follows:

Episode 1-a.—John More of Scotland in 1773 decided to come to America, bringing his family with him. The first scene is laid in the parish in Scotland, the villagers on their way to attend the weekly prayer service. The bagpipers are playing merrily as the group moves along, but John More lags behind and wearily throwing himself on the green, falls asleep.

Interlude.—In his sleep he dreams and sees the spirits of Freedom, Opportunity and Prosperity beckoning him as they dance, a foretaste of the New World. Betty, John's wife, returning from the prayer meeting to find her husband, is told of the vision and the final decision is made to go to America.

Episode 1-b.—The family, John and Betty and two sons are leaving Scotland, bidding farewell to friends and taking with them their good wishes and the blessing of the minister.

Interlude.—The primeval forests and meadows of the New World are typified by dances of the Spirits of the Mountains and the Spirits of the Trees and Rivers.

Episode 2.—The Indians appear on the scene in two groups. One group is made up of warriors in full paint, headed by their chief, the other is a more serious group of Indians and squaws, headed by the prophet, who foretells the coming of the white men, and the consequent conflict between these new comers and the Indians.

Interlude.—Rip Van Winkle, much depressed by the last tirade of his wife, rather dejectedly moves across the scene, accompanied by his dog and a group of unnoticed children. The Dutchman of the mountains halts him and Rip disappears carrying off the keg of beer.

Episode 3-a.—Arrival of the Moors in Harpersfield, about twenty miles from Moreville to be in 1773. Spending the winter in New York, they sail by sloop to Catskill, then securing two horses and a cow, they make their way into Delaware county and lay the foundation for Moreville, now Grand Gorge. John and his family are visited by Colonel Harper of Harpersfield and by Joseph Brant, an educated Mohawk Indian chief.

Episode 3-b.—Revolution in 1775. John signs the Articles of Agreement, upholding the Union and the Continental Congress.

Episode 3-c.—The Indians favor George III. Brant and followers burn all the property and crops at Harpersfield. Then remembering his friendship for More, Brant warns him of the danger which threatens him and his family and they flee by night for Catskill, just before the Indians burn their property.

Episode 4.—The Moors are taken in Catskill by a Dutch family named Van Orden. John More becomes a Minute Man. There is drilling by Minute Men, village scenes and the dashing approach of a messenger bearing the news of the coming of the Red Coats and Indians.

Episode 5.—After the war the Moors returned to Moreville which they re-established. Town meeting is held at the Moreville Hotel on the site of which the Grand Gorge Hotel now stands. During the time of the meeting a couple drive up to be married and a country dance is at once set in motion.

Episode 6.—Family grouping and finale, in which all the eight branches of the More family appear under their separate banners, and the pageant closes with the singing of America by all of the performers.

It is expected that a large number of Kingstonians will visit Roxbury to witness this pageant.

ASHOKAN.

Ashokan, July 26.—The annual fair of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Ashokan M. E. Church will be held on the afternoon and evening of August 4, in the hall that has lately been constructed for church purposes. Sandwiches and fruit punch will be on sale in the afternoon to appease the hunger and thirst of those who stop to see our display of fancy and useful articles. "Made in Ashokan" is the slogan of our candy and popcorn booth. The doll booth will be a thing of beauty as Mrs. Barclay has spared neither time nor pains to make them appear at their best in their pretty new dresses. The handkerchief booth promises to be quite large and if you do not need any for yourself look over the booth and select a few for gifts for your friends. The hot chicken supper served from 5 to 10 p. m. at the nominal price of 50 cents will help solve the supper problem for the tired housewife on this day and help us to realize more from the fair. Don't take our word about these booths but come and see what the Ladies' Aid has been doing and test the supper prepared by them.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1287—A Neat, Attractive House Dress in Pleasing Simplicity—Ladies' House Dress, With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

Dotted black and white percale is here shown, with trimming of white pique. This model will make a very desirable morning dress, and is equally attractive for business or "porch" wear. The skirt has new lines, and the waist has such a comfortable "long" shoulder and neat closing. The pretty collar and smart cuff are also good features. The sleeve in wrist length is very fashionable. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 5 1/4 yards of 44 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures 2 2/3 yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 27, 1915.

It is a relief to know that the sinking of the American steamer Leelanaw adds nothing to the strain in the relations between this country and Germany. The law requiring visit, search and the safeguarding of the lives of non-combatants appears to have been observed the same as it was in the case of the William P. Frye, for which ship and its cargo Germany has already promised to make compensation. Consequently, she will also pay for the damages in this case. The United States, however, claims that under the treaty of 1828 between this country and Prussia, the validity of which Germany admits, Germany has no right to sink American vessels, whether they are carrying contraband or not, but may only remove and destroy their cargoes or such part thereof as may be contraband. It is also extremely doubtful if flax is contraband unless it is destined for Government use. These questions, however, are not of the kind which lead to war, since they involve property questions merely, and not human lives, and they will eventually be settled by negotiation or arbitration if in the meantime other issues do not cause a rupture between the two nations.

The difference of opinion regarding the Frye and Leelanaw affairs is similar to the dispute between this country and Great Britain regarding the latter's interference with our shipping. No American lives have been lost through any act of England, but a great deal of the money of our citizens has been lost through the detaining and diverting of laden ships. We have protested to that country just as we have to Germany, and an answer has been received the text of which has not yet been published, but which is understood to justify the British policy on the ground that it is strictly in accordance with international law and with precedents in the record of the United States Government itself during the civil war and sustained by decisions of our own Supreme Court. We are not sure that this claim is well founded, since these decisions were based on facts in some respects different from those now under consideration, but, as the British note points out, we have non-violent remedies for any wrongs we may have suffered.

It is possible, distressing as the prospect may be, that our Government may not be able to justify its claim that "innocent shipments may be freely transported to and from the United States through neutral countries to belligerent territory." In that event there will be nothing for us to do but to submit and collect damages, since the rules cannot easily be changed in the middle of the game. The disadvantage will, however, be remembered, and when world peace is again restored our representatives will certainly use all their influence for such a revision of international law as will assure freedom of the seas for neutral commerce in any circumstances in the future. If the different nations refuse to agree upon what contraband is, as is very likely, we may be driven to take the ground that there is no such thing, and we may have to insist that there be no more blockades of any kind.

Since we have been brought to the verge of war with Germany over the killing of only 121 American citizens, it would be highly inconsistent if our Government faltered in bringing to justice the scoundrels whose greed and carelessness resulted in and drowning of one or two thousand passengers in the Eastland disaster at Chicago. President Wilson appears to apprehend this point and is pressing a searching investigation. Hanging is the appropriate punishment for the guilty persons, but it can hardly be administered under the law. It must be, however, that there is some way to send them to the penitentiary. This is a case for stern vengeance which will frighten other owners and managers of vessels and Government inspectors all over the country into doing their duty. The Eastland is not the only unsafe boat in American waters. There are also other vessels which habitually carry more passengers than the law allows. Inspection and the pretended enforcement of regulations is such a farce that one is forced to suspect that bribery on the part of owners and their agents is quite general. Of course some owners are merely investors and have nothing to do with the management of their vessels, and in such cases the captain and other officers are responsible and should be punished. It is a curious fact that no officer or member of the Eastland's crew ever raised a warning voice regarding the vessel's condition. Perhaps this was due to misdirected loyalty to their employers, and it may never occur to those of them who have survived that they are accessories to wholesale murder.

WHERE WE OFFEND.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

May I repeat those vigorous words of Robert Louis Stevenson: "There's so much bad in the best of us, And so much good in the worst of us, That it scarcely behooves any of us, To talk about the rest of us?"

Which is a sort of preamble or half apology for a series of complaints. Maybe it is a small, queer sort of complaint, but for years I have wanted some one to tell me why we faithful, conscientious churchgoers slip from our pews on Sunday morning or evening, fresh from sermons ringing with the law of consideration and love for our fellowman, and walk to the drug store in search of the cooling drinks it has to offer.

It is inconsistent with our acceptance of the mandate which prescribes "six days" for labor; it is unkind of the clerk whose dream of a restful Sunday was long since rudely disturbed; and it weakens our argument against the open door of the saloon, which we do not want to remain within our more hallowed precincts.

The summer days and evenings are warm, and after the exhausting heat of indoor service, refreshment is welcome; but is there any excuse to pass from church to drug store at the simplest behest of personal comfort? It does not look well to the onlooker and reflects upon the church we profess to honor.

We look back to the days of Puritanism without a regret for the passing of rigorous customs that were a hardship and were a real benefit to none; but it seems a pity to have grown so lax in a matter that hurts churchgoer and clerk alike.

And when we reach the quiet and comfort of home we too often sit down to a meal the most elaborate of the week, prepared by one who had need of the "seventh day" for rest. True, the family is all united on that one day, there is no relentless clock striking the hour for return to work, and everything seems to invite a bit of indulgence in excess of that granted during the week. But might we not better have retained that feature of Puritanical teaching which exacted "cold meals on Sunday" and permitted rest for the weary? It would be more consistent with our protestations of brotherly love and the consideration that inheres in our conception of the golden rule.

We hope for breadth of judgment and a fair sense of relative values, and so when we see a boy who works during the week happily swinging his baseball club, or workman or woman seeking recreation from the cares of the week in ways that do not interfere with another's comfort, tolerance bids us look the other way and get our sense of proportion in order. But on the one day in the week set apart by Christianity for rest and devotion, ought we not to feel that there is no excuse for overburdening home workers for so small a personal gratification?

Women are fond of the notion that to us belongs rather more of the subtle refinements of life than to men; that if the scales show a balance in favor of the graces of sympathy, pity and broad humanity, the honor comes to us.

If such hope and belief are warranted and are to remain justified we must strengthen certain vulnerable points in our armor. We must not leave it to tradesmen to force us to do our shopping early enough that they may be given a little leeway on Saturday. It is a sorry sort of comment upon us that grocers often are kept on a rush filling orders to the last minute, orders that they should have been permitted to forget in the early hours of the day.

Whatever excuse we may offer for the hard workers, there is none for us; and the sight of women—and men—sometimes offend—leisurely strolling into a shop in the closing hours of Saturday and ordering goods for late delivery is—well, isn't it un-Christian? And should not pride in our standards of life be sufficient to draw us back from such thoughtlessness?

Years ago in a prosperous section of the city, long after the shades of night had fallen, I saw a lad of about ten years fast asleep in a wheelbarrow, waiting for the tardy shoppers to leave their orders for the Sunday supply. It was a needless spectacle, traceable to lack of thought or care.

Do we not, in truth, need to put our house in order? If we could, or would, manage to straighten out our relative values and keep in mind the other side, our protestations of loyalty to the good would be more meaningful in the everyday walks of life, and the cloak that envelops us on the one day of the week would fall in place more naturally and effectively to the end. FRANCES SHAFER.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Mother—"Ella, what has happened to your doll?" Ella—"The doctor says it's nervous breakdown, and he has prescribed mutillage."—Judge.

"Why was that young fellow dismissed from the paper?" "Because he wrote up the baby show as a howling success."—Baltimore American.

"A statesman is supposed to be familiar with all public questions." "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "but not necessarily with all the answers."—Washington Star.

Husband—"I don't see why you have accounts in so many different stores." Wife—"Because, my dear, it makes the bills so much smaller."—Boston Transcript.

Hokus—"Fluddub is very careful about the training of his family, isn't he?" Pokus—"Yes; he tries to bring up his children in the way he should have gone."—Puck.

"What are your plans for the summer?" "Further exploration, I suppose," answered Mr. Maymings. "I'm going to keep on looking for some place that carries out the impressions I get from the pictures of the summer resort postcards."—Washington Star.

On the General.

An amusing anecdote is told of Lord Cardigan, who fought in the Crimean War when a coalition of England, France, Turkey and Sardinia fought Russia. Cardigan was a choleric old General whose bursts of temper were a constant dread of subordinates. It once happened that provisions for the troops ran very short. One morning, when the General appeared for breakfast, the cook came before him and said in a troubled tone: "Pardon me, your Lordship, I have set the table in the dining tent as usual, but there isn't any bread!" "No bread," roared the General. "Why didn't you buy some?" "There isn't any to be had; the stores are all run out," replied the cook. "Well, don't stand there like a blooming idiot! Why, under the sun, don't you get some toast?"—Philadelphia Star.

A military attaché said at a Washington luncheon: "Modern warfare has no picturesque, no beauty. A wounded soldier at Chancellorsville was asked to describe his impressions of a modern battle. He eased his face bandages and replied:

"A modern battle? What's it like? Well, first you hear a deuce of a noise, and then the nurse says, 'Try and take a little swaller of this.'"—Washington Star.

Summed Up.

Richard Le Gallienne, the poet, was lunching at a fashionable restaurant when a man loomed into the room in a velvet coat, soft black silk shirt, fine Windsor tie, sandals and other such-like fripperies. "Look at that!" laughed Mr. Le Gallienne. "Oh, look at that!" "Hush," said a magazine editor, sternly. "Hush! That's Blank, the famous short story writer. You can't have genius, you know, without eccentricity." "Perhaps not," said Mr. Le Gallienne. "But judging from what he writes you can evidently have a deuced big lot of eccentricity without genius."—New York Evening Post.

Wanted: Guidance.

"Um, yes. Ah!" remarked the medico in his best bedside manner to his patient as they stood in the consulting room. "I'll give you the following prescription," and he handed him three small packages.

The patient opened them and read the directions: "A powder for my headache," he said aloud; "a pellet for my liver," he continued; "and a capsule for my gouty foot." Then he stopped and pondered for a moment. "I say, doctor," he queried, "how'll the little beggars know the right place to go when they get inside?"—Buffalo Express.

DUTCH AUCTION!

We have seven Hall Settees, all in oak, that sell at from $10 to $30 each regularly. They take up considerable floor space which we can utilize more profitably for the display of new Fall merchandise. To accomplish our purpose and to close out the Settees in quick order, we are going to hold one of our popular Dutch Auctions. The Settees have been placed in one of our show windows. The original prices are placed on a piece of cardboard, and each day they are marked down 50 cents until the Settees are sold.

Watch this window display closely, and when the prices have been reduced to the point at which you feel inclined to buy, step into the store and clinch your bargain. But watch out that "the other fellow" doesn't "beat you to it."

Nightmare.

Often nightmare is caused by an overloaded stomach, and then the remedy is to eat a light evening meal. If nightmare is the cause of high mental tension, which it often is, then spend the evening in some diversion that does not require much mental effort and yet keeps the mind from dwelling on disturbing subjects.—New York Journal.

YOUR TROUBLES.

John Wesley was once walking with a brother, who related to him his troubles, saying he did not know what he should do. They were at that moment passing a stone wall, over which a cow was looking.
"Do you know," asked Wesley, "why that cow looks over that wall?"
"No," replied the one in trouble.
"I will tell you," said Wesley. "It is because she cannot look through it. And that is what you must do with your troubles—look over and above them."

One Tooth With Sense.

After a lot of picking and tapping with his instruments the dentist straightened up and addressed the patient in the chair:

"There's a large cavity in one of your molars, three small cavities in the other molars, the incisors ought to be straightened, one bicuspids needs a crown, and in the open space on the lower jaw we can fit in a tooth that will be as good as new."

"How about my wisdom tooth, doc?" asked the patient.

"That seems to be all right."

"Well, thank heaven that I've got one tooth with enough sense to keep out of the general smashup!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Romantic Touch.

"George, father objects to my marrying you."

"Yes. I'm so glad. Now, how romantic our marriage will be!"—Detroit Free Press.

Prefers to Sleep Some Other Way.

"Take this medicine according to the directions," said the physician, "and you will sleep like a baby."

"You will have to excuse me, doctor," modestly replied Miss Fortyninth. "My married sister's baby sleeps with its big toe in its mouth."

Sikh's Death Disk.

Around the "point" of their turbans the Sikhs warriors carry a steel weapon which looks very much like an ordinary quill, but is called a "chakkar."

This quill has an edge like a razor, and the Sikhs throw it by twisting it round the finger, and then suddenly releasing it. The weapon flies through the air revolving horizontally, and inflicts a terrible wound on any one it strikes. At a distance of twelve yards one of these "chakkars," in the hands of an expert, has been known to cut a two inch bamboo cane completely in two. Obviously, the safest place in which this weapon could possibly be carried is on the top of the turban, where it is out of the way.—London Tit-Bits.

Making Himself Heard.

Samuel Rogers, the poet, is no doubt a great wit, but he has a turn for malice and even brutality. Some one once asked him why he never opened his mouth except to speak evil of his neighbors. He replied, "I have a very weak voice, and if I did not say malicious things I should never be heard."

Peace.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself; nothing but the triumph of principles.—Emerson.

Open Air Barbers Inain.

Fingers that smell of ole soap that gives no lather, a razor that may have been used for cutting hair and a flourish that reminds of an executioner rather than a barber—such are the qualifications of the itinerant Spanish hairdresser, a victim—we use the term advisedly—must be a patient, long suffering, neither the slave of time nor any petty feelings such as delicacy or sensitiveness, as otherwise he were badly at the hands of his tortor, for the Spanish open air barber aims man, who takes everything for granted and never for a moment does that you are satisfied with his actions and will pay him accordingly.—The World.

Time's Change

"You know when I was here some years ago," remarked the man who had just dropped in and had a little boy about six years who you thought was the brightest in the world."

"Yes, I remember," with reply, "but he's been through college since then."—Yonkers Statesman.

Not Likely.

"People don't put on a whole lot of frills," said Uncle Eben, "not expect to have an unruffled top."

PLAYING FOR CRAWFORD

Back in the days when the Chicago team of the American league was led by Fielder Jones and were fighting the Detroit Tigers bitterly there was no love lost between the teams.

One afternoon in a game on the South side, Chicago, Jones raced back to the fence and by leaping high into the air and spearing a ball with one hand robbed Crawford of a home run. The next time Crawford came to the bat he caught one on the handle and Jones, racing in, grabbed what looked like a sure Texas leaguer off his shoetops.

As the men passed each other on their way to and from the field Jones sneered: "It's a cinch to play for you. You always hit 'em in the same place."

SHECKARD GOT THE SIGNALS

Cub Outfielder Wasn't Sure Whether Manager Chance Was Going to Try for Second Base.

James Samuel Tilden Sheckard pulled many a funny one while he was playing ball, but one of the funniest was in a game in 1908. Those who saw Chance grow furious over something his good friend and great player had done never understood why.

Chance had switched the batting order and was hitting just ahead of Sheckard that day and had made a new hit-and-run sign. Late in the game, with the score tied, Chance reached first and gave Sheckard the signal.

Sheckard took a strike straight through the plate and never moved. Chance had started, but turned and by a desperate slide got back to first in safety. He arose, gave Sheckard the signal again and started. Sheckard took a second strike, and Chance was thrown out.

"What was the matter, Sheck?" inquired Chance on the bench. "Didn't you get that signal?"

"Yes, Frank," replied Sheck, seriously: "I got 'em both times, but, do you know, I was standing there trying to think whether they meant you were going or that you weren't, and he slipped over two strikes."

DISADVANTAGE TO MAKE HIT

Mike Donlin Tells Story of Rube Waddell—Remembered Those Players Who Piled Safeties.

The occasion doesn't often arise in a ball game where it is a player's disadvantage to make a hit. But according to Mike Donlin this occasion once existed.

"Any time," says Michael, "that I got a hit off Rube Waddell the rest of my afternoon was spoiled. I had no further pleasure left in the game. After that one hit I spent the rest of the afternoon with my foot in the water bucket. For the Rube remembered each guy that hit him safely, and it was a case of ducking the bean ball on the next trip to the plate."

"A base hit," added Mike, "is something; but having your head used as a target the rest of the day is also something."

Secret of Good Memory.

The secret of good memory is attention, and attention to a subject depends upon our interest in it. We rarely forget that which has made a deep impression on our minds.—Tryon Edwards.

SERGEANT O'LEARY AND T. P. O'CONNOR
BRITAIN'S WAR HERO ON RECRUITING CAMPAIGN.

At the left in the carriage is the famous Sergeant O'Leary, Britain's war hero, who single handedly captured twenty-five Germans and was decorated with the Victoria Cross. O'Leary has been wounded several times and was reported killed, but turned up in true miraculous style. He is now in England on a tour and is conducting a great recruiting campaign. He is shown here with T. P. O'Connor, M. P., riding to Trafalgar Square to speak at a recruiting rally.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 27.—While there was some irregularity at the opening of the stock market this morning, the most important feature of the early trading was an urgent demand for war order stocks. Many of these issues made what in other times would be called sensational advances and several of them again were established at new high records. The greatest advance was made in Bethlehem Steel, which rose 1 1/2 points to 232 1/2, compared with a low of 207 on the flurry yesterday. American Can advanced 1 1/2 to 61 1/2. Baldwin Locomotive gained 3/4 to 84 1/2. Republic Iron and Steel gained 1 1/2 to 37 1/2. American Coal Products gained 3/4 to 145 and Crucible Steel 1 1/2 to 48. Goodrich Rubber rose 2 1/2 to 53. General Electric moved up 2 1/2 to 177 1/2. New York Air Brake advanced 3/4 to 104 1/2. Trading in United States Steel Common was on a large scale, this stock advancing a point to 65 1/2.

Noon.—Nearly all the speculative interest was attached to the war order issues and trading in these issues continued on a large scale. Bethlehem Steel made a further gain, selling at 233 against 221 at the close yesterday. American Coal Products made a gain of seven points for the morning, selling at 149. Crucible Steel advanced to 51 1/2, a gain of 3/4 for the morning. Baldwin Locomotive, American Locomotive and Westinghouse Electric held about steady, selling fractionally above their opening prices. U. S. Steel Common reacted a 1/2 point. Money loaning at 1 1/2 per cent.

2:30 p. m.—The "war stocks" were the most prominent in the late trading with interest concentrated in Bethlehem Steel, which sold around 249 1/2 in the first half of the last hour against 221 at the close last night. Westinghouse held around 108 1/2 against 107 at the opening. Although some issues were fractionally lower the undertone was firm. The stock market closed strong. Height of Ocean Waves.
An authority says the height of the waves in a storm rarely exceeds twelve feet, and in very bad disturbances on the high sea they may reach a height of fifty feet. Their length is never over 600 feet. In the southern parts of the Pacific, waves 45 feet in height have been measured, in the southern parts of the Atlantic 39 feet, and in the Mediterranean 13 feet. At places where the waves strike at an angle, such as a lighthouse, they rise, of course, much higher—from 100 to 200 feet. On the open sea, however, they never rise over 50 feet.

Wood Fires.

Do you know that there is a different fragrance, a different manner of burning to each tree, whose parts you bring to the open campfire or your own hearth; that some woods shriek at this second death after the cutting, that others pass with graceful calm, and still others give up their dearest reality at the moment of breaking under the fire, like the released spirit of a saint that was articulate heretofore only in beautiful deeds?—Will Levington Comfort in The Craftsman.

Two Ideas of the Picnic.
The Hindu term for picnic is said to be, by literal translation, "fool's feast." But the Anglo-Indian who likes to take his best girl and a basket of indigestible edibles upon an arduous journey to a distant place, to eat delightedly a much worse dinner than he might have at home, has more imagination and a keener rest of life than the native who assumes an air of superiority.

Chivalry.
The age of chivalry is never past so long as there is a wrong left unredressed on earth, or a man or a woman left to say: "I will redress that wrong or spend my life in the attempt."—Charles Kingsley.

A Farewell to the Mountains

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Jerry Whitecomb, a young American, had a hobby—mountain climbing. On several successive summers he went to some of the principal mountain regions of the world and scaled a peak. But his favorite location was Switzerland. Indeed, that is the favorite mountain country of most persons. Whether or not it is finer than the others is a question, but there is one thing about it that gives it superior attraction. It is in the heart of Europe and in the line of tourists.

Whitecomb had a favorite guide who lived at Scheidegg, a point from which climbers have been long used to start to ascend the Jungfrau. This was before a railroad was projected to carry tourists to the top of the mountain, and Schmitt, the guide referred to, had a chalet not far above Scheidegg.

One day when Whitecomb had passed the crest of middle age he appeared at Scheidegg and found his old guide smoking his pipe in front of his chalet. "My old friend," said the American, "I have come for a last climb. I will soon be old and not able to make these ascents. I wish you to pilot me once more."

"Ah, herr," replied the guide, "don't talk that way. I am several years older than you, and yet I must go on climbing, else I and my family will starve."

There was a sadness in this reply that made Whitecomb sorry for what he had said. "Ah, well, Schmitt, you have been used to climbing all your life. You will always be at home in the mountains."

Schmitt's little daughter was playing near and at the moment she called out:

"Papa, who is that woman over there?"

"The woman on the glacier,"

Schmitt turned to Whitecomb and asked him if he could see a woman on the glacier, his own eyes being not so good as they had been. Whitecomb peered in the direction of the glacier, but said he could see no woman.

Schmitt turned pale.

"Something troubles you," said Whitecomb.

"It is the spirit of the mountains. She appears only to children and never even to a child except she is going to claim a victim."

The fact that the two men were to climb the Jungfrau made this statement a matter of concern to them. Whitecomb could not bring himself to believe that the child saw what she claimed to have seen. Some one of the cracks in the ice or a rock must have appeared like a woman's figure. He said as much to Schmitt, but the latter shook his head.

"Many children," said the guide. "Have seen the Jungfrau and never except that one or more persons have been killed on the mountain within a short time after the appearance of the specter."

They set out about 3 o'clock in the morning intending to make the climb during a single day. Whitecomb had forgotten the vision of Schmitt's little daughter and was very cheery. His guide was quite the reverse, seemingly being much cast down. On the way they picked up another guide, making a party of three, and when they came to the dangerous part of their climb they joined their bodies by a rope. Schmitt in the lead, Whitecomb in the center, the other guide, whom Schmitt addressed as Hans, in the rear.

They climbed till noon before reaching the summit; then, looking out on the expansive field of snow peaks, Whitecomb gave way to rhapsody.

"Goodby, old friends," he said. "It's many a day's companionship we've had, but now we must part. You who have existed for ages in your present form doubtless will exist for ages to come. Your snow covered rocks will endure for millions of years after my puny body has mingled with the dust. My friends, farewell."

"Ach! Herr, do not talk that way. There is something prophetic in what you say."

"I don't mean," replied Whitecomb, "that I am going to leave this world immediately. I expect to live to be an old man. But I'll do no more climbing."

"No, herr, you'll do no more climbing," replied Schmitt, with a solemnity that passed through the other like a chill mountain breeze.

They spent an hour on the summit, then turned to descend. They had not gone far before one of those sudden snow squalls that come on so frequently out of a fine day enveloped them. Schmitt was in the advance and halted, as though he had lost his bearings. Then he moved on, but staggered. Presently the snow gave way beneath him, and he went down, dragging Whitecomb with him. Hans threw himself in the opposite direction. The rope snapped. Schmitt and Whitecomb slid out of sight with the snow. Hans fell into a snowbank not a dozen feet below.

The storm soon passed, and Hans, making his way back to Scheidegg, reported the accident and the disappearance of his companions. A searching party went out to look for the bodies and found that the two men had gone over a precipice a thousand feet deep. Descending, the searchers saw that they had doubtless fallen into a crevasse. The American sleeps among the mountains he loved and to which he had bidden farewell.

The house here presented, while designed for two families, is entirely suited to any first class residential neighborhood. There has been no attempt made to disguise its true character, yet at first glance it looks like the suburban residence of the successful city man of affairs. A solid party wall makes the two establishments as entirely distinct as though they were on separate streets, while the arrangement of the chimneys and fireplaces assures the greatest economy in construction, even the same copper or galvanized conduit for rain water from the front gables being used in common.

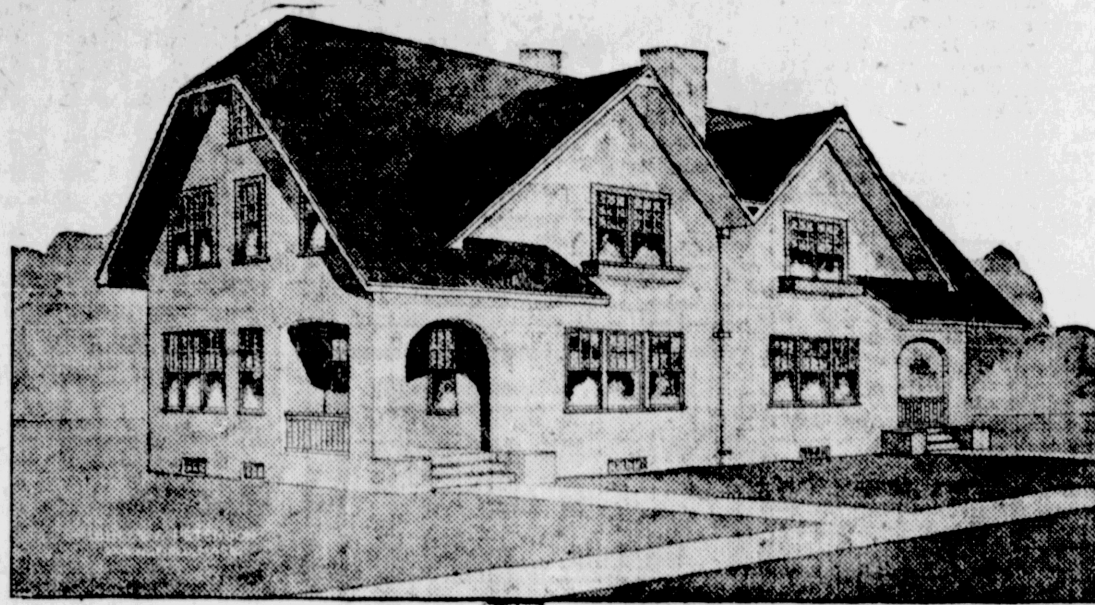

The house is finished in stucco with shingled roof. The M formed by the front gables, the double and triple group windows, arched piazza doorways, heavy paneled front doors with small-pane windows near the top, and the flower boxes at the second and third floor levels, the attractiveness of its appearance from the street.

To the right is the living room, 16.6x13 feet, with fireplace. To the left is the dining room, 12.8x12 feet. A large group window is the special feature of this room. The pantry, with ample china closet, cupboards, etc., projects slightly from the main body of the house, a somewhat unconventional arrangement, but one whose advantage a study of the plans will make plain.

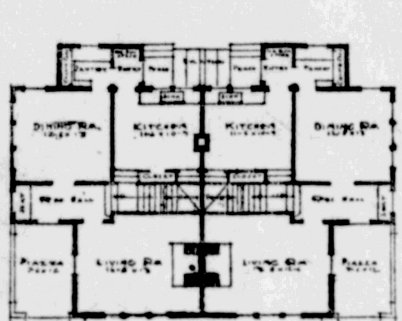

The pantry opens into the rear entry, and the latter into the kitchen, 11.6x10.9 feet, the respective doors being so arranged that no extra steps between dining room and kitchen are necessitated. The kitchen has a very large store closet, a door on one side of the latter leading to the basement stairs, one at the other end directly on to the main stairway, making a short cut between laundry, kitchen and chambers.

FIXING BLAME FOR EASTLAND HORROR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 27.—With six separate investigations under way looking toward fixing the responsibility for the disaster to the steamer Eastland which turned over and caused the deaths of approximately 1,200 persons, a tangle of confusion arose today and politics threatened to overshadow the big question of "Who is to blame?"

In the inquiries, Coroner Hoffman, Republican, representing the Densen faction of the party, and the Mayor Thompson faction, represented by the police, were not working in accord.

State's Attorney Hoyne, a Democrat, was handling another investigation which was not entirely in harmony with the one being made by the federal officials under Secretary of Commerce Redfield's direction.

These facts appear to substantiate the charge that a political tangle has made itself felt.

The police confiscated all the papers found on board the Eastland. Coroner Hoffman demanded that the documents be turned over to his deputies. Deputy Superintendent of Police Schuetzler had signified his intention of complying with the coroner's demand, when Chief of Police Charles C. Heyward ordered them turned over to the federal investigators.

At the Hudson Avenue police station, Captain Harry Peterson of the Eastland, is a prisoner. Orders were in effect that no one was to see him except representatives of the federal authorities.

Raising of the Eastland was begun today by the dredge Favorite, the largest boat of its kind on the great lakes. Even with this giant lifter in service, old river men expressed the opinion today that she would prove unequal to the task and that pontoons would have to be used.

Two huge dredges were set to work dredging the bottom of the river between the overturned hulk and the docks at Clark street, preparatory to righting the vessel.

The raising of the boat, it is believed, will release many more bodies still imprisoned beneath the hull. While cables were being passed under the ship, divers worked inside in a desperate effort to reach more of the bodies entangled in masses of wreckage in the hold.

The bodies recovered, and the number of employees unaccounted for in the plant of the Western Electric Company brought the semi-official count of the dead to 1,239.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, July 27.—War, as a hazardous occupation, doesn't seem to have much on the bike racing game.

Eighteen years ago Bobby Walthour became a professional biker, and this is what has happened since then:

He has broken his right collar bone 27 times; broken his left collar bone 18 times; suffered rib fractures 20 times; has had more than 40 stitches taken in both legs; has more than 100 body scars as the result of bruises; he has about 60 stitch marks in his face, forehead and head as the result of sewed up wounds; has broken six of the ten fingers on his hands; has been pronounced dead twice and "fatally injured" at least six times.

"And I'm still able to do a bit of racing now and then," said Walthour. "I've been mighty lucky during my 18 years as a racer. I've been in more than 250 'spills' and never once have suffered a broken leg. If I had, my career would have ended. A biker can race even if his arms are in a sling, but if he ever broke a leg, it's all off. He's through for good."

"My most peculiar spill? Well, I guess it happened in Leipzig, (Germany). A bunch of riders went down in front of me. I was so close to them that I couldn't steer clear. I hit the bunch and down I went. That's the last thing I remember until I came to in America four weeks later."

"However, the peculiar part of that spill is that after I hit the boards I got up, climbed on my bike and although I had a broken collar bone, two broken fingers, a nasty gash in my head and a ten inch rip in my leg, I finished and won the race which had only about six laps to go from the place where the spill occurred."

"I don't remember a thing about getting up. My memory was a blank from the time I catapulted from the saddle until I 'came to' nearly a month later in my home in New Jersey."

"Is there very much money in the racing game now?" Walthour was asked.

"No, not in America," he answered. "In the old days a good biker could make from $12,000 to $20,000 a year. In those days a fellow worked on a percentage basis. There always was good money in it then. On July 4th, 1904 I rode an afternoon race near Boston and got $1,750. That night I entered another race and got $1,100. That made a total of $2,850 for one day's work. What I did the other racers also did."

"Nowadays a racer in America who earns $4,000 or $5,000 a season is doing mighty well. The bike game went to the bad in America about 12 or 13 years ago. Soon after that I went to Europe and the game continued good there right up to the time of the war."

"Not only did the racers get prizes and guarantees for their work, but they also got fat bundles of money for using the different products of the European manufacturers."

"I drew down from $6,000 to $8,000 each year from the manufacturers while in Europe for riding a certain kind of bike, using certain handle bars, tires and saddles. The manufacturers were so keen about having well known racers use their goods that they used to bid against each other for the privilege of landing the contract of a biker."

Walkill Loses to Mohonk.

Mohonk Lake, July 27.—Saturday's game with Walkill was somewhat of a disappointment to those who had looked for a close contest like former games with the clever team from the valley. Both sides fielded loosely and the features of the game were Juckett's home run and the heavy hitting of the Mohonk batters who drove Wilkins from the box in the sixth inning and accorded little better treatment to Caswell, who succeeded him. Walkill took the lead in the early innings, but finally lost, 11 to 6.
